DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Faiks et al. ('117). Faiks et al. shows a working chair with adjustable backrest support pre-set tension, comprising a seat part (3) having a forward edge; a backrest support (4) having an end part pivotally connected to the seat part; an energy storing device (1,8) for biasing the backrest support against the back of a seated user; a manually operable adjustment mechanism (6) for adjusting a pre-set tension of the energy storing device, a guide bar (11) pivotally mounted at the forward edge of the seat part and having a free, swiveling end close to the seat edge; the energy storing device (8) being rotatably mounted on the free swiveling end of the guide bar and the rear end of the energy storing device adjustably engaging the end part of the backrest support at a contact point (see Figs. 8-10), and the contact point between the rear end of the energy storing device and the end part of the backrest support being adjustable. An interlocking element comprising a toothed rack (50) having a plurality of catching recesses faces the energy storing device comprises a spring (8) and spring guide (60) extending therethrough with a tooth (75) to engage one of the recesses. Faiks et al. further shows that the engagement could be stepless between the energy storing device and end part of the backrest (see Figs. 18-20).

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Reference Nos. 5,160,184 shows features of the claimed invention.
